

Distributed mobile energy storage site inverter

Overview

Oak Ridge National Laboratory researchers have developed an intelligent power electronic inverter platform that can connect locally sited energy resources such as solar panels, energy storage and electric vehicles and smoothly interact with the utility power grid.

Oak Ridge National Laboratory researchers have developed an intelligent power electronic inverter platform that can connect locally sited energy resources such as solar panels, energy storage and electric vehicles and smoothly interact with the utility power grid.

In 1999, the Commission established Standardized Interconnection Requirements and Application Process for New Distributed Generators and/or Energy Storage Systems 5 MW or Less Connected in Parallel with Utility Distribution Systems (SIR) to allow such Distributed Energy Resources (DER) to.

As markets and technologies for inverters grow, so does the importance of choosing between central and string inverters for energy storage projects. Typically, central inverters have been the standard for commercial and utility-scale energy storage applications. But that is shifting as costs drop.

Bidirectional electric vehicles (EV) employed as mobile battery storage can add resilience benefits and demand-response capabilities to a site's building infrastructure. A bidirectional EV can receive energy (charge) from electric vehicle supply equipment (EVSE) and provide energy to an external.

NLR's advanced power electronics and smart inverter research supports the integration of distributed energy resources on the U.S. electricity grid. Integrating renewable and distributed energy resources, such as photovoltaics (PV) and energy storage devices, into the electric distribution system.

While central inverters have traditionally been the go-to solution for large-scale energy storage systems, string inverters are gaining momentum due to their numerous advantages. This shift is especially evident as the technology and costs evolve, making distributed battery management inverters an.
