The Federal Energy Management Program's (FEMP) Distributed Energy and Energy Procurement initiative helps federal agencies accomplish their missions through investment in lasting and reliable energy-generation projects and purchases. For more than 30 years, FEMP has helped federal agencies with.

beyond what a trailer can deliver. These rugged, self-contained systems integrate large solar arrays, advanced battery storage, and high-capacity fuel cells — with optional diesel redundancy when regulatory or client. Can federal agencies implement microgrids at their sites?

Report explores procurement options and agreements that may be useful to federal agencies interested in implementing microgrids at their sites. The free, online REopt platform is designed to help building owners, developers, utilities, researchers, and everyday citizens understand their optimal energy solution.

Are high soft costs a barrier to energy storage deployment?

In 2018, the New York Public Service Commission (NY PSC) identified high soft costs as a major barrier for energy storage deployment in their state. The CPUC Energy Storage Procurement Study aims to address similar challenges in California.

What are mobile energy storage systems?

Mobile energy storage systems exhibit diverse applications, serving as essential infrastructure across sectors including construction, renewable energy, and emergency services. They are instrumental in transitioning to zero-emission power solutions.

How can energy storage benefit a grid?

Energy storage can provide significant value to a grid by helping with frequency regulation. Today's energy storage technologies are very flexible and can shift bulk energy from periods with low marginal emissions (e.g. midday) towards periods with high marginal emissions (e.g. evening peak).
